AstraZeneca Profits Fall, Covid Vaccine Sales Slide

London: Covid-vaccine maker AstraZeneca said Friday that profits fell sharply in the first half on ballooning costs linked to its takeover of US biotech firm Alexion. The pharmaceutical group added that sales of its Covid-19 vaccine Vaxzevria slumped 49% in the second quarter. Net profit slumped 64% to $746 million compared with the first six months of last year, AstraZeneca said in a statement. Operating expenses jumped 33%, "reflecting the addition of Alexion, and continued investment in new launches and the pipeline" of drugs, the group said. That offset a 48% jump in revenue to more than $22 billion. Revenue rose strongly thanks to sales of Alexion medicines. The group said annual revenue from Covid-19 medicines is anticipated to be broadly flat compared with 2021. AFP

StanChart Unveils $500 Million Share Buyback as Rising Rates Boost H1 Profit

SINGAPORE Standard Chartered reported first-half pre-tax profit rose 19%, above market expectations, as the emerging markets-focused lender benefitted from rising interest rates and gave an upbeat outlook, pushing its Hong Kong shares 2% higher. The strong performance unveiled on Friday showed how some banks with an eastern focus are shrugging off the impact of a weakening macro environment in the US and Europe that is emerging as a key risk for others. Reuters

Meta Repeats Threat of Pulling Facebook, Instagram from EU

Moves comes amid data flow ban it faces from Ireland's data protection watchdog

Meta Platforms Inc reiterated its threat to pull its popular Facebook and Instagram services from the European Union if a new transatlantic data transfer pact doesn't materialise. Its latest warning comes amid an imminent data flow ban it already faces from Ireland's data protection watchdog, which oversees the tech giants based in the country. The Irish Data Protection Commission could issue a key decision on a possible ban of EU-US data transfers under so-called standard contractual clauses in the next three months, Meta said in a regulatory filing, which could risk paralyzing transatlantic data flows. SCCs, as they're known, are designed to protect consumers from having their private data shipped abroad without their consent. The EU and US in March broke a deadlock to reach a tentative deal on a new data-transfer pact after a previous accord was struck down by the bloc's top court over concerns US agencies could snoop on the information without adequate privacy safeguards. Negotiations on a new pact won't likely conclude before next year, by which time the Irish might already have issued their ban on the SCCs. "If a new transatlantic data transfer framework is not adopted and we are unable to continue to rely on SCCs or rely upon other alternative means of data transfers from the European Union to the United States, we will likely be unable to offer a number of our most significant products and services, including Facebook and Instagram, in Europe," Meta said in a US regulatory filing. "This would materially and adversely affect our business, financial condition, and results of operations," it added. The controversy over data transfers dates back to 2013 when Edward Snowden exposed the extent of spying by the U.S. National Security Agency. Bloomberg

Facebook Ends Funding for US News Partnerships Programme

Co says it doesn't make sense to invest in areas that don't align with user preferences

Washington: Meta Platforms says will no longer pay US news organisations to have their material appear in Facebook's News Tab as it reallocates resources in the face of the economic downturn and changing user behaviour. The company said Thursday that most of people "do not come to Facebook for news, and as a business it doesn't make sense to over invest in areas that don't align with user preferences". Meta, then called Facebook, launched the partnerships in 2019. The "News Tab" section in the Facebook mobile app only displays headlines - and nothing else - from The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, BuzzFeed News, Business Insider, NBC, USA Today and the Los Angeles Times, among others. The company did not say how much it was paying the news organisations,

Park, California, said in a statement Thursday that "a lot has changed since we signed deals three years ago to test bringing additional news links to Facebook News in the US." On Wednesday, Meta Platforms Inc posted its first revenue decline in its history and forecast weak results for the current quarter as well. Meta does not pay for news content that outlets post on its platform. The News Tab deals, the company said Thursday, were for "incremental content, eg, ensuring that we had access to more of their article links and that we were including a range of topic areas at launch." The company said Facebook News will continue in the other countries it currently in, and the shift in the US won't change the deals in those places - the UK, France, Germany and Australia. AP

Biden & Xi Could Meet in Person, US Official Says

Washington: President Joe Biden and China's Xi Jinping are exploring meeting in person, a senior administration official said after the leaders spent more than two hours Thursday talking through the future of their complicated relationship, with tension over Taiwan once again emerging as a flashpoint. Biden conducted the telephone call from the Oval Office, where he was joined by top aides, including Secretary of State Antony Blinken. The official declined to be identified to talk about the private conversation. When Biden was vice president, he spent long hours with Xi in the United States and China, an experience he often recalls as he talks about the two countries' opportunities for conflict and cooperation. However, they have not met in person since Biden became president last year. Xi has left mainland China only once, to visit Hong Kong, since the Covid-19 pandemic began. However, he's been formally invited to Indonesia in November for the next G20 summit of the world's leading economies, making the conference a potential location for a meeting with Biden. The latest strain over Taiwan is House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's potential visit to the island, which has governed itself for decades but China asserts as part of its territory. Xi emphasized those claims during his call with Biden, according to China's Ministry of Foreign Affairs. "Those who play with fire will perish by it," the ministry said. "It is hoped that the U.S. will be clear-eyed about this." The White House released its own description of the conversation about Taiwan, saying that Biden "underscored that the United States policy has not changed and that the United States strongly opposes unilateral efforts to change the status quo or undermine peace and stability across the Taiwan Strait." The goal of the call, which began at 8:33 am EDT and ended at 10:50 am EDT, was to "responsibly manage our differences and work together where our interests align," the White House said. As usual, China left no doubt that it blames the US for the deteriorating relationship between the two countries. "President Xi underscored that to approach and define China-US relations in terms of strategic competition and view China as the primary rival and the most serious long-term challenge would be misperceiving China-U.S. relations and misreading China's development, and would mislead the people of the two countries and the international community," the Ministry of Foreign Affairs said. AP

Truss Sets 2.5% Growth Target for UK, Vows to Revisit BoE Mandate

Liz Truss, the UK foreign secretary and front runner to become prime minister in September, has doubled down on a pledge to review the Bank of England's mandate as she set out an economic growth target for the UK of 2.5% a year. In an interview with Conservative Home, she recommitted to plans to "revisit the mandate" but stressed that she would preserve the BOE's independence. No decisions have been made but a review is needed given the high levels of inflation, Truss insisted.

Euro Zone Growth & Inflation Accelerate, Recession Looms

GDP expands 0.7% q-o-q in Q2 vs 0.2% forecast; inflation hits 8.9% in July, higher than predicted

Brussels | Frankfurt: The euro zone economy grew much faster than expected in the second quarter, but economists said it might be the economy's last hurrah before ever-higher inflation and supply chain problems cause a mild recession in the second half of the year. The stronger growth came despite stagnation in the bloc's biggest economy Germany, where high inflation and fears of a gas crisis triggered by the war in Ukraine have caused consumer and business sentiment to plummet, economists said. The EU's statistics office said eurozone gross domestic product rose 0.7% quarter-on-quarter in the April-June period for a 4.0% year-on-year gain, strongly beating expectations of a 0.2% quarterly and 3.4% annual gain. Meanwhile, inflation rose to another record high in July and its peak could still be months away, keeping pressure on the European Central Bank to opt for another big interest rate increase in September. Consumer price growth in the 19 countries sharing the euro currency accelerated to 8.9% in July from 8.6% a month earlier, far above expectations for 8.6% and well clear of the ECB's 2% target, Eurostat said. "The acceleration in economic growth is mainly due to reopening effects and masks underlying weakness due to high inflation and manufacturing problems," ING economist Bert Colijn said. Reuters

Sri Lanka Inflation Climbs to 60.8% as Dollar Crunch Persists

Sri Lanka's headline inflation surged to a record in July as food and fuel remained scarce amid depleted foreign exchange reserves. Official data on Friday showed consumer prices in the capital Colombo rose 60.8% from a year ago. That compares with the 62% jump from a median estimate by three economists in a Bloomberg survey. Prices are still soaring even as economic activity has almost ground to a halt. Bloomberg

Xiaomi's $10-b Car Project Hits Regulatory Barrier

Xiaomi Corp. is facing difficulties getting regulatory approval for its electric vehicle project in China, an unexpected hurdle for the smartphone giant's $10-billion car-making endeavour. The Beijing-based company has been talking to officials at the National Development and Reform Commission about the licensing for months without success, according to people familiar with the matter. Xiaomi is one of the later would-be entrants to a Chinese EV sector already teeming with rivals, including longer-established names BYD and Nio. But billionaire cofounder Lei Jun, who has said EVs will be his final startup endeavor, hopes Xiaomi's expertise in connected technologies and building loyal user communities can translate in the world's biggest EV market. But the longer the delay in securing a license, the bigger the head start its rivals will gain. The smartphone and electronics maker is pursuing new growth areas after logging its first sales decline on record in the first quarter. While some Xiaomi executives are hopeful the authority will eventually green-light the EV project, others worry the process will delay the company's plans, said one of the people, who asked not to be named discussing internal matters. Xiaomi incorporated its EV subsidiary in September 2021, allowing the company to begin the application process. A Xiaomi representative declined to comment. The NDRC didn't immediately respond to a fax seeking comment. China has been stepping up scrutiny of the EV sector, after a rush into the industry led to a spate of high-profile bankruptcies. New EV applicants are asked to submit a series of documents to prove their financial and technological capabilities, and the review process can take months. The government also sometimes rejects applications, with companies then back at square one when it comes to the regulatory process. The absence of a carmaking license has had limited impact on Xiaomi's EV development efforts for now, said one of the people. The EV division has more than 1,000 employees and Xiaomi has said it plans to mass produce its first vehicle in 2024. It has acquired land in the southeastern suburbs of Beijing for an assembly plant, and bought EV startups to add technology. In early 2021, Lei pledged to invest about $10 billion over 10 years to make Xiaomi-branded cars. The 52-year-old has largely retreated from the public eye to spend time on the EV project. China's electric car market is already crowded, with Tesla, Nio and Warren Buffett-backed BYD among the biggest players. A growing number of tech companies from Baidu Inc. to Huawei Technologies Co. are exploring business opportunities in autonomous driving, smart cockpit and power management technologies.

Zelensky Oversees Loading of First Grain Export Ship

Kyiv: President Volodymyr Zelensky has visited a port in southern Ukraine to oversee grain being loaded for export onto a Turkish ship, the presidency said on Friday, following a deal with Russia brokered by the UN and Turkey. "The first vessel, the first ship is being loaded since the beginning of the war. This is a Turkish vessel," Zelensky said, according to a statement from the presidency. Video footage from the Chornomorsk port released by the presidency showed him in front of a ship called Polarnet. The statement said exports could start in "the coming days" under the plan aimed at getting millions of tonnes of Ukrainian grain stranded by Russia's naval blockade to world markets. "Our side is fully prepared. We sent all the signals to our partners — the UN and Turkey, and our military guarantees the security situation. The minister of infrastructure is in direct contact with the Turkish side and the UN. We are waiting for a signal from them that we can start," Zelensky was quoted as saying. The presidency said the export of grain will begin with several ships that were already loaded when Russia invaded in February but unable to set sail due to the start of the war. "The deal to lift Russia's blockade — the first significant accord involving the two warring sides since the assault began — is aimed at helping mitigate a global food crisis that has seen prices soar in some of the world's poorest nations. Ukraine — one of the world's top grain exporters before the war — says it aims to export some 20 million tonnes of produce, worth some $10 billion, under the plan.

Russia, Ukraine Trade Blame for Shelling of POW Prison

KYIV Russia and Ukraine on Friday accused each other of shelling a prison in a separatist eastern region that reportedly killed dozens of Ukrainian prisoners of war who were captured after the fall of Mariupol in May. Russia said that Ukraine used U.S.-supplied HIMARS multiple rocket launchers in the attack on the prison in Olenivka, in the Russian-controlled Donetsk region. AP
